PART IV

CHILDREN IN OTHER CONTEXTS
[PERHAPS CHANGE TO “CHILDREN AS MATURING PERSONS” OR “CHILDREN IN SOCIETY”]

Chapter 18 INTRODUCTION/GOALS AND PRINCIPLES Children’s authority to make decisions and act on their own behalf is circumscribed by the decisionmaking authority granted to parents and school officials. There are, however, certain contexts in which children can exercise greater control, particularly as they approach the relevant age line between childhood and adulthood. Children are also afforded special protections, not only those secured through parental and educational obligations, but through abuse-and-neglect, criminal, and child-labor laws. Finally, children have legal obligations that are modified to reflect their immaturity.
